This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

CHRONOLOGICAL SUMMARY

WESTERN ARMIES OF THE CONFEDERACY.

THE preparation of these tables has been attended with much difficulty, owing to the want of anything like full and systematic printed records from the Confederate side, and they will be found to contain many omissions which we have been unable to supply, even after extensive correspondence and inquiry. We have found more difficulty in getting the true statement of losses on each side than in anythnig else. The tables under this head have been taken mainly from the United States Surgeon General's Report. This Report is a monument of patient work in its fullness; but in many instances, for the want of official data, it has given the statements of newspapers, which often exaggerated the loss inflicted and underrated the loss suffered, according to partisan bias. A heavy loss in killed and wounded is never discreditable to the forces engaged, but, on the contrary, a pretty clear indication of obstinate fighting.

For information as to troops engaged in minor affairs and battles beyond the Mississippi, we are greatly indebted to the volumes of the "Rebellion Record," by Moore. From the clue afforded by this source we have often been able, through aid of Colonel Charles C. Jones' invaluable "Roster of Confederate Officers and Military Organizations" (volumes 1, 2, 3 Southern Historical Society Papers), to get the necessary information with much exactness.

We urge upon all readers who discover errors or omissions in these tables, either as to the troops engaged, losses on each side, dates or localities, to send us the proper correction. By this means this summary can be made historically accurate, or so nearly so as to become of inestimable value for future reference. Our purpose in sending it out now is to give opportunity for correction and to invite further additions to it. We want specific information, in tabular form if convenient, of every affair in the West, no matter how trivial. Address,

LETTER OF GENERAL WHEELER, ACCOMPANYING HIS TABLES.

WHEELER, ALA., December 5, 1878.

Col. E. L. Drake—My Dear Sir: Your favor of the 1st is received, inclosing a list prepared by yourself of the engagements in which my command participated, together with the losses on both sides in said battles and affrays, with request that I correct and return the paper to you.

The list, as returned, is from notes prepared by an officer of my staff during the war.

Of course, we cannot claim accuracy regarding the Federal losses in every instance, but, when losses of the enemy are mostly prisoners, we cannot be far out of the way, and, when we were able to do so, we corrected by Federal statements.

We know that at Lavergne, Tenn., on Dec. 30, 1862, we captured fully a thousand prisoners and several hundreds of wagons.

At Harpeth, Jan. 13, 1863, we know we captured a gunboat and transports and prisoners, as stated.

On Feb. 3rd, we know our loss was 168, and the opposing officer puts his loss at 16 killed, 60 wounded, and 50 captured; so we put that figure as correct, while we know we captured more than 50 prisoners.

In the fight with Federal cavalry Sept. 21, 1863, in Chattanooga Valley, we know we are correct. We know that out of one of Rosecranz's best brigades, only 75 men returned with General Watkins to Chattanooga.

We know the Federal loss at McMinnville was at least 587, because we counted that number of prisoners, and we are sustained by Greeley's History, written at the time, which, on page 433, puts the Federal loss at 600 in prisoners alone.

We know we captured more than a thousand wagons and 6,000 mules in Sequatchie Valley, Oct. 2nd, and Greeley so states it on the same page of his History, and General Halleck, in effect, states the same in his annual report for the year 1863, as General-in-Chief,* and

*Page 185, Vol. 8, Moore's Rebellion Record, General Halleck says: "After General Rosecranz retreated to Chattanooga, he withdrew his forces from the passes of Lookout Mountain, which covered his line of supplies from Bridgeport. These were immediately occupied by the enemy, who also sent a cavalry force across the Tennessee above Chatta-

Van Horne, in his History of the Army of the Cumberland, pages 392 and 393, while he used the words "hundreds of wagons," fully corroborates Greeley's statement.

We also know we captured 250 prisoners at Marysville, and 300 at Little River, Nov. 14, 1863.

We know we captured General La Grange and 160 prisoners at Varnell's Station. Van Horne, page 50, says La Grange and 14 officers were captured, and 136 men were killed, wounded and captured.

We know we captured over 400 prisoners and over 250 wagons at Cassville, May 24, 1864.

We know that at Crab Orchard we captured 80 prisoners, and we are certain we must have killed and wounded fully 60 men.

At Hadley's Bend and Hurricane Creek, April 10, 1863, we know we captured trains of cars and prisoners, as stated.

At Farmington, the Federals published their loss as Col. Monroe and 59 killed and 169 wounded, and, although we captured 20 prisoners, we put their loss at but 228.

The Federal loss in the McCook, Garrard, and Stoneman raids, July 27th to 30th, we estimate at not under 4,500. We captured fully 3,000* prisoners and nearly 4,000 horses and arms.

In Sherman's book, pages 16 to 21, he puts down his force of cavalry present for duty on April 10, 1864, at 24,765, and says he was then recruiting them up; and he states, page 84, that General Rousseau arrived at Marietta on July 22d with 2,500 effective cavalry, which had been brought from the North.

From early spring we had hacked away at this ponderous force, and, after this last affair, General Sherman admitted himself to be almost without cavalry: at least he claimed to be very weak in that arm of the service.

During the fight at Newnan, and those that preceded it, the same morning, the Federal loss, in killed and wounded, was not less than 900. Supplemental Report on the Conduct of the War, Vol. I., page 147, says: "General McCook was attacked, on the 29th, near Newnan, by infantry and cavalry in overwhelming numbers, surrounded, and all, who did not cut their way through, were either killed or captured." The truth is, there was no infantry within forty-five miles of the batnooga, which destroyed a large wagon-train in Sequatchie Valley, captured McMinnville and other points on the railroad, thus almost completely cutting off the supplies of General Rosecrans's Army."

*Captain S. W. Steele, of General Wheeler's staff, gives 3,150 as the exact figures.

tle. McCook was mistaken about being surrounded. It is true that, after bringing him to a stand, I threw a squadron upon the road I presumed he would wish to retreat on; but the engagement was a cavalry fight of man to man, and our force was less than half that of General McCook.

In McCook's Official Report (page 148 of work above cited), he says: "I was finally completely surrounded, and compelled to abandon every thing that would impede me, in order to cut my way through. I ordered Colonels Croxton and Torry to cut through with their brigades. I took Colonel Jones with me, and got through 1,200 (twelve hundred) men by a charge in column. Colonel Dow, Colonel Torry, Major Austin, wounded; Major Paine, killed; Harrison, missing, supposed a prisoner. My loss very heavy."

General Sherman officially reported McCook's column at about 3,500, and Garrard's and Stoneman's columns at about 4,000 and 2,500 respectively. (Page 142 Supplemental Conduct of the War, and page 87 Shreman's book.) Greeley, page 633, says: "McCook had two divisions—his own and Rousseau's (now Harrison's) freshly arrived divisions—numbering 4,000."

At the time, we estimated the Federal loss at 5,000; but, not to over-rate, I put it down at 4,500.

Our raid in Tennessee followed, and we put Federal loss at 1,900, which is moderate, considering the numerous engagements had and prisoners captured.

We can learn something of these operations by looking at General Sherman's letters and dispatches to General Halleck and General Grant, sent at the time, and works published by Federal officers since the war.

We see that Sherman says (pages 16 to 21 of his book) that on April 10th his cavalry present for duty was 24,765; and on page 84 he says Rousseau brought in 2,500 more. Now, on page 135 he states his entire cavalry force on Sept. 1st was but 9,394.

It will be remembered that on July 27th, Sherman stated McCook's command to be about 3,500, and Greeley (page 633) stated it at 4,000. Now, it will be recalled that these 4,000 men of McCook's, which he had on July 27th, were picked men from his large division, and, therefore, he must have left considerable force in camp recruiting. But even all these added to those which escaped from Newnan, only left him 1,754 men, for that was his entire force August 10th, as stated by General Sherman in his Memoirs, page 98. This shows that Sherman's losses of cavalry up to that time must have been very great.

Early in August it became evident that it was impossible to feed our cavalry horses. For twenty days my command had averaged but one pound of corn per day.

The enemy's cavalry were now so completely broken up and disheartened that we felt certain they would not harm our communication, and, pursuant to orders, I took one third of our effective cavalry and struck the railroad behind Sherman, and then marched north, tearing up the road and capturing and destroying his supplies and trains.

Sherman immediately sent large reinforcements to the fortified posts in his rear, and also had reinforcements en route south to his army stopped, to increase the various garrisons.

We struck the road August 10th, and continued its destruction until September 10th—constantly fighting forces under Major-Generals Steadman, Rousseau and Granger.

We find, in Supplemental Report on the Conduct of the War, Vol. I., page 175, Sherman, in two different dispatches, dated Aug. 17th, says Wheeler was in his rear with 6,000 men; and on page 192 he says, under date of Sept. 8th: "Generals Rousseau, Granger and Steadman have enough troops to handle Wheeler." On page 193, under date of Sept. 8th, Sherman says: "I want Wheeler cleaned out, the roads repaired, and every thing to the rear made right." Same page, dated Sept. 9th, Sherman says: "Generals Rousseau and Steadman are stirring Wheeler up pretty well, and I hope they will make an end of him, as Gillem did of Morgan." On Sept. 10th, page 194, Sherman dispatched General Grant: "Our roads are also broken back near Nashville, and Wheeler is not yet disposed of. Still, I am perfectly alive to the importance of pushing our advantage to the utmost. I do not think we can afford to operate further, dependent on the railroad. It takes so many men to guard it, and even then it is nightly broken by the enemy's cavalry."

On page 195, same book, General Sherman dispatched General Halleck, Sept. 12th: "I do not think I need, at this time, cavalry horses in undue proportion. I have lost faith in cavalry raids. Independent columns of cavalry might operate by a circuit from one army to another, and destroy the enemy's cavalry, which is more to be feared by us than their infantry. As soon as General Grant determines for me the next move on the chess-board, I will estimate the number I will want, and, in the meantime, would not ask more than a fair proportion for remount. Wheeler might have been utterly destroyed, if we had had more cavalry, but that is now too late."

Notwithstanding the number of troops sent to the rear, and detained in his rear to protect the Federal line of communication, we find, on page 130, Sherman's Memoirs, the following: "The Rebel General Wheeler is still in Middle Tennessee, threatening our railroads. To prepare for this, or any other emergency, I ordered Newton's Division of the Fourth Corps back to Chattanooga, and Corse's Division of the Seventeenth Corps to Rome, and instructed General Rousseau, at Nashville, Granger, at Decatur, and Steadman, at Chattanooga, to adopt the most active measures to protect and insure the safety of our roads."

Assuming that these divisions were equal to the other divisions of the corps to which they belonged, this detachment, alone, would be 13,286 men

Newton's Division had 6,199 men present and 13,037 on the rolls.

Corse's Division had 7,087 present and 14,286 on the rolls.

And yet, notwithstanding all this, Sherman quotes (page 152 of his Memoirs) the following dispatch to General Grant: "It will be a physical impossibility to protect the roads now, that Hood, Forrest and Wheeler, and the whole batch of devils, are turned loose."

The above citations throw some light upon the character of the service of the cavalry and the way it was regarded by Federal commanders. We have said this much in explanation of engagements where cavalry fought unaided by infantry.

The list designated as battles fought by cavalry and infantry, in which the cavalry was under my command, need but little comment.

They are probably as correct as circumstances would permit. Some are very nearly, if not quite, correct, while others are, no doubt, estimates, and need comparison with other accounts, but all give an idea of the work performed and the extent and severity of the several engagements.

At Murfreesboro, our cavalry fought on the left, where the enemy was defeated and broken up, and where most of the prisoners were captured. Also, during the four days of the battle, we captured many prisoners in the enemy's rear.

At Perryville, our cavalry did very severe fighting, capturing nearly all the prisoners which were taken. On the left we charged over both cavalry and infantry, capturing a battery.

At Chickamauga, we broke through the enemy on the left, pressing to their rear, and capturing largely of prisoners, and the next day we captured nearly a brigade of Federal cavalry.

At siege of Knoxville, I suppose the prisoners captured south of the river are included.

Resaca includes cavalry prisoners captured and fights approaching the place, and the severe fight on the right on the morning of May 13th.

Kennesaw includes the cavalry fights incident thereto and the severe fight on the morning of June 27th.

Siege of Atlanta includes several days' engagements.

There are many fights where our statement of loss must be regarded as merely an estimate.

As it was very important to keep informed of the enemy's strength, I always kept a tabulated statement of the organization of the army which opposed us, which I constantly corrected by information obtained from prisoners, scouts, spies and other sources.

We also obtained, by the same means, information regarding Federal losses, and our estimates of the Federal killed and wounded are often based upon such information; of course, also corrected by our personal observation. When a line charged our works, and were repulsed, we could, of course, form some idea of the cost to them of such a movement. For instance, on the evening of May 27, 1864, Howard's Corps attempted to turn General Johnston's right. Their cavalry first made a sharp dash at us, which we repulsed and drove back upon their main line, which was forming to advance and envelope our right. The discovery gave time to fell trees and make breast works just in rear of a ravine they would cross in approaching us. Their first assault was repulsed, and, as the second was about to be commenced, I was reinforced by Granberry's, and, afterward, by Govan's, and, finally, by Lowry's brigades, and for an hour the fight was as warm as is often experienced. From the nature of the attack, I judged the Federal loss could not be less than 3,000 or 4,000: so reported that night to General Johnston, and have never had reason to change my opinion, and I state it at 3,600. The warm part of the battle did not last over an hour, and the loss of my cavalry was 356, and that of the infantry which assisted was 448.

At McLemore's Cove, Sept. 17, 1863, we captured 100 prisoners, and, from the nature of the fight, must have killed and wounded as many more.

On May 17, 1864, we had six good fights with Sherman's advance, all our positions being behind favorably posted works, and, at our last position just before dark, we were reinforced by a brigade of infantry. The fights really amounted to battles, and we put Sherman's loss at 480—four times ours Van Horne's History, page 71, describes the affairs in a manner which convinces us we are under, rather than over, in our estimate.

On July 3, 1864, we warmly engaged the enemy's vigorous advance, and, besides capturing over 100 prisoners, we fusiladed and cannonaded from our several positions, often at very close range, in a manner which certainly justified our estimate of the Federal loss.

On June 20th, we drove the enemy's cavalry for some three miles, captured a large squadron, and inflicted a loss which could hardly be less than our estimate.

On July 17th, we had several fights, captured a number of prisoners, and felt that we could not estimate entire loss of troops opposing us at less than 220.

At Elk River, the fighting was very severe, and the enemy were held back by log-works and by an attack with two regiments with which I charged their flank.

Page 119 of Appleton's Annual Cyclopedia for 1863 says: "General Thomas moved rapidly to strike the enemy. The resistance of General Wheeler was so stubborn, that General Negley was delayed until the trains of the enemy had crossed Elk River. They crossed their reserve artillery, consisting of 26 pieces"

I have tried to put down the regiments engaged, and have done it as accurately as I could and with what data I have, but, no doubt, have made many mistakes, and I hope any errors will be corrected by others.

With great respect, your friend and servant,

JOS. WHEELER.
